三、阅读理解选择题

We all need cash（现金）in order to live our lives. However, something called digital currency is slowly taking the place of cash. A currency is kind of money. Usually, we use currency when we talk about a country's money. If something is digital, it only exists（存在）on a computer. So "digital currency" means money that only exists on computers.

Lots of people have digital currency accounts（账户）. They use a credit card（信用卡）to change their real money into digital money, and then the money goes into the digital currency account. A lot of people wonder, "Why in the world should I change my real money into digital currency?" This is a fair question, but there's a good answer. If you want to buy something online, then you usually have to use digital currency. For example, if you're in China and you want to buy something in Canada, then you'll have to pay with the digital currency.

Many people still don't trust digital currency. Some people think that if they can't hold their money in their band, then it doesn't seem real. These people don't feel comfortable when they see numbers on a computer screen. The computer tells them that their money is safe but these people don't really feel safe. Another problem is security（安全）. There are hackers all over the world. A hacker is a person who steals computer information. If a hacker gets the password of your digital currency account, he or she can steal your money.

Many of us don't pay attention to the importance of eye care. It's said that if you take care of your body, then you can be healthy. That is why our eyes should be given a lot of care. Natural eye care should be put in a number one place.

There are several causes leading to poor eyesight like not enough food, gene(基因) and aging(年龄增长). Televisions, computers and reading are also the causes of having poor eyesight.

If you happen to work in front of the computer, it is best to take a rest every once in a while. Something dirty can cause redness and they will make you feel uncomfortable. It is bad for your eyes, too. If this happens, the best way is to clean your eyes by using cold water. You must also try your best to protect your eyes from harmful thing. For example, sunglasses are not just fashion but they can also serve as a great way to protect your eyesight from harmful UV rays.

Eating healthy foods will do good to your eyesight. Remember that vitamins(维生素) A、C and E are good for eyes. Try to eat food groups that have these vitamins. And you should do eye exercises because exercise protects your eyesight, too. If a person exercises regularly(规律地) and eats the right kind of food, his eyes will stay in good condition for a long time.

All above are natural ways of eye care that help us keep healthy eyes. Being happy all the time can be helpful to a person's eyesight, too. In a word, eye care is very important, no matter how old a person is.

三、阅读理解匹配题

[A] It looked like a scene from "Jaws" but without the dramatic music. A huge shark was slowly swimming through the water, its tail swinging back and forth like the pendulum of a clock. Suddenly sensitive nerve ending in the shark's skin picked up vibrations of a struggling fish. The shark was immediately transformed into a deadly, efficient machine of death.

Moving to Survive

[B] In pursuing its prey, the shark demonstrated in a dramatic way the important role of movement, or locomotion, in animals. Like the shark, most animals use movement to find food. They also use locomotion to escape enemies, find a mate, and explore new territories. The methods of locomotion include crawling, hopping, slithering, flying, swimming, or walking. Humans have the added advantage of using their various inventions to move about in just about any kind of environment.

升本公众号

Skin Is the Key

[C] The biologists discovered that the skin of the shark is the key to the animal's high efficiency in swimming through the water. The skin contains many fibers that crisscross like the inside of a belted radial tire. The fibers are called collagen fibers.

[D] The Duke University biologists have found that the greatest stretching occurs where the shark bends its body while swimming. During the body's back and forth motion, fibers along the outside part of the bending body stretch greatly. Much potential energy is stored in the fibers.

Source of Energy

[E] What causes the fibers to store so much energy? In finding the answer the Duke University scientists learned that the shark's similarity to a belted radial tire doesn't stop with the skin. Just as a radial tire is inflated by pressure, so, too, is the area just under the shark's collagen "radials". Instead of air pressure, however, the pressure in the shark may be due to the force of the blood pressing on the collagen fibers.

[F] When the shark swims slowly, the pressure on the fibers is relatively low. The fibers are more relaxed, and the shark is able to bend its body at sharp angles. The animal swims this way when looking around for food or just swimming. However, when the shark detects an important food source, some fantastic involuntary changes take place.

Dolphin Has Speed Record

[G] Another fast marine animal is the dolphin. This seagoing mammal has been clocked at speeds of 32 kilometers (20 miles) an hour. Biologists studying the dolphin have discovered that, like the shark, the animal's efficient locomotion can be traced to its skin. A dolphin's skin is made up in such a way that it offers very little resistance to the water flowing over it.

[H] In a dolphin the skin is so flexible that it bends and yields to the waviness of the water. The waves, in effect, become tucked into the skin's folds. This allows the rest of the water to move smoothly by in a laminar flow. Where other animals would be slowed by turbulent water at rapid speeds, the dolphin can race through the water at record breaking speeds.

31. According to the passage, a shark can use movement to find food, to avoid being chased by its enemies, and to find a new place to live.

32. The skin is the key to the shark's swift locomotion in water.

33. According to the Duke University scientists, when bending its body in swimming, the shark stretches its collagen fibers to the greatest extent.

34. Because it is also inflated by pressure, the area just under the shark's collagen fibers similar to a belted radial tire.

35. When the shark detects an important food source, some fantastic involuntary changes take place.

三、阅读理解选择题

The Bedouin people, a tribe living in the deserts of Arabia and Northern African, think most highly of people who show loyalty. To them loyalty does not mean that one is devoted to a country, a place, or a leader. Loyalty means being faithful to one's family and tribe.

The Bedouin people are proud of their ancestors. They do not admire a hero from an ordinary or poor family as much as one who comes from an honored family. They especially respect those who have inherited a good family name and then have passed it on to their children.

A man's position among his people depends upon his ancestors, relatives, and fellow tribesmen. If they are honored, he is also honored. If they are disgraced, he, too, is disgraced. Therefore, one carefully guards the honor of his family and his tribe.

A man can protect his family's honors by being brave and generous and by giving protection to those who ask for it. He also guards it by carefully watching the women of his family.

A Bedouin woman cannot bring honor to her family, but she can bring disgrace. Even if a woman only looks as if she has done something wrong, she may be killed. The honor of her family depends upon her virtue (美德).

21. The best title for this passage can be _____.

A. Life of the Bedouin People

B.Women's Position in the Bedouin Family

C. Bedouin People's Idea of Loyalty and Honor

D. How to Guard Honors

22. The Bedouin people think most highly of one who is _____.

二、阅读理解选择题

Bank account is one way of keeping your money safe. Many people hide their money at home, but they run the risk of losing it in a fire. The safest place to keep money is in a bank, either in a checking or in a savings account. You can certainly use the money in their account at any time, but there is often a service charge. There are some restrictions on taking out money from savings account at any time. However, you can collect interest (on the money) that you are not using.

Opening a bank account is not difficult in the United States. Many banks like to get more customers. But you should make sure that you have chosen a right one that has a low service charge and a good interest rate. If you want to travel to another part of the United States, you can buy traveler's checks. It is a good way to protect

三、翻译

26. More and more young Chinese people like traveling. This is a new fashion these years. Why are there more young travelers? Because they have more money now, and they want to see new places. When they travel, young people don't spend much time in big cities or famous beautiful spots. Instead, they like to go to quiet or faraway places. Some even take long trips with just a backpack. A new study says many young people travel to see new ways of life, learn more things, and see more of the world.

三、阅读理解填空题

Many students want to find friends on the Internet as a way of practicing their language skills and learning more about new cultures. With the Internet, finding friends has become much easier.

Here are some tips on finding friends on the Internet:

Search the Internet for reputable services. Look for reviews of such sites to learn more about others' experiences. Don't join a service until you have done research.

Check to see if you can use a nickname, instead of your real name, to protect your identity.

Stop contacting with others if you feel uncomfortable with the topics of the conversation.

[A] In its 13 years, the London Marathon has acquired a degree of excellence. That excellence is not just the great energy of the best runners and the smoothness of the organization, but also the quality of determination shown by all the competitors, male and female, able-bodied and disabled.

[B] When more than 26,000 gather at Greenwich tomorrow morning, only a few will get the big prize money. The success of this event is that most of the athletes would be prepared to pay serious money just for the privilege of running the 26 miles 385 yards to The Mall past the most famous urban scenery in the world.

[C] The London Marathon has become one of Britain's leading sports events. Since 1981, something like 45 million has been raised in individual sponsorship for charities. Tomorrow hundreds of thousands of people will line the route to cheer and millions will watch on television. Many spectators will wonder whether they could complete the historic distance next year. This is how athletic dreams are born.

三、阅读理解选择题

What makes one person more intelligent than another? What makes one person a genius, like the brilliant Albert Einstein, and another person a fool? Are people born intelligent or stupid, or is intelligence the result of where and how you live? These are very old questions and the answers to them are still not clear.

We know, however, that just being born with a good mind is not enough. In some ways, the mind is like a leg or a muscle. It needs exercise. Mental exercise is particularly important for young children. Many child psychologists think that parents should play with their children more often and give them problems to think about. The children are then more likely to grow up bright and intelligent. If, on the other hand, children are left alone a great deal with nothing to do, they are more likely to become dull and unintelligent.

Parents should also be careful with what they say to young children. According to some psychologists, if parents are always telling a child that he or she is a fool or an idiot, then the child is more likely to keep doing silly and foolish things. So it is probably better for parents to say very positive (helpful) things to their children. Such as “that was a very clever thing you did” or “you are such a smart child.”

26. Albert Einstein mentioned in the first paragraph is a_____.

A. worker

B. president

C. genius

D. fool

27. Compared with the words “intelligent" and “brilliant” in the first paragraph, the word “dull” in the second paragraph means_____.

A. pretty and handsome

B. common

三、阅读理解选择题

We know that a diet full of whole grains, fruits and vegetables is healthy. It might even help us avoid some diseases, such as cancer or heart disease. But did you know that the foods you eat might also affect how you think and feel? Maybe by changing what you eat, you can be happier or smarter!

Picture this, it's the middle of the night and you're lying in bed, wide awake. You wonder if a snack will help you sleep. If you choose right, you might drift off to dreamland. But eat the wrong snack, and you'll still be awake when the birds begin to sing. What will it be? Some foods help people feel relaxed and sleepy: cereals, potatoes, or pasta, for example. But who wants spaghetti (意大利式细面条) in the middle of the night? How about a cup of warm milk? For many people, that's just the right thing for relaxation.

How about this: it's one of those awful days when everything seems to go wrong for you. What foods will make you feel better? Super-sweet snacks, such as candy or soda, can give you a quick lift. But beware: those sweets will let you down with a crash in a short while. Instead, try a handful of Brazil nuts, a glass of milk, or a spinach salad. All these foods contain nutrients (营养物) that seem to lift spirits and help fight the blues (忧郁).

But why do certain foods affect our moods? The answer is complex and has to do with certain chemicals called neurotransmitters (神经递质). Neurotransmitters carry messages to and from our brains. Neurotransmitters do more than carry messages. They also produce some of our moods, such as happiness or relaxation. Many neurotransmitters are built from the foods we eat. If you don't eat enough of a certain food, your brain might not be able to make enough of the neurotransmitter that helps you feel energetic. As a result, you might feel sleepy instead of awake.

So the next time you feel sad because you had a fight with your best friend, try a glass of milk and a handful of Brazil nuts instead of that soda. You might be surprised at how much better you feel.

Benefits of Recycling

Recycling is important for our environment and offers several advantages. In this article, we will explore the benefits of recycling and why it matters.

Waste is Reused:

Recycling allows us to reuse waste instead of throwing it away. Materials like paper, plastic, glass, and metal can be collected, sorted, and turned into new products. This reduces the need for extracting new resources and minimizes waste in landfills.

Energy Saving:

Recycling helps conserve energy. It takes less energy to make products from recycled materials. For example, recycling aluminum cans saves a lot of energy compared to producing new ones. By saving energy, we reduce pollution and protect the environment.

Pollution Reduction:

Recycling plays a role in reducing pollution. When waste is buried in landfills or burned, harmful chemicals are released into the air and water. Recycling minimizes waste in landfills and decreases the need for burning, which helps in reducing pollution levels.

Natural Resource Conservation:

Recycling helps conserve natural resources. Many products are made from limited resources, like trees for paper or oil for plastic. By recycling, we extend the lifespan of these resources and protect our environment.

Community Engagement:

Recycling promotes community involvement and awareness. When we participate in recycling programs, we become more conscious of our consumption habits. It encourages responsible behavior and cultivates a sense of unity in taking care of our planet.

Recycling brings various benefits, including waste reduction, energy saving, pollution reduction, resource conservation, and community engagement. It is a simple effective way for individuals and communities to contribute to a cleaner and more sustainable future. By making recycling a part of our daily lives, we can make a positive impact on the environment and create a better world for ourselves and future generations.

Benefits of Recycling

31. _____ reduces the need to get new resources and makes less waste in landfills.

32. Making products from recycled materials requires less _____than producing new ones.

33.Recycling reduces landfill waste and lowers the need for burning, which helps decrease_____ .

34. By recycling, we can conserve_____ and extend the lifespan of these resources.

35. When we recycle, we become more aware of how to use things. It encourages_____ and creates a sense of unity in caring for our planet.

三、阅读理解匹配题

[A] Technology – the practical applications of science or the other knowledge- is a major source of social change. We have only to look around us to see how our way of life and social behavior are influenced by various technologies, ranging from kitchen tools to automobiles.

[B] Most technological innovations (新发明)are based on existing scientific knowledge and technology. The more advanced a society is in this respect, therefore, the faster the pace of technological change is likely to be. And the more rapid the technological change, the more rapid is the social change that it generates.

[C] The rate of technological change in modern industrial societies is very fast. It took only sixty-six years from the first flight of the Wright brothers to the landing of the first astronauts (宇航员) on the moon. Throughout most of history, however, people lived in a world little difference from that of their parents, and they expected their children and grandchildren to live much the same lives as they did.

[D] Traditional societies assume an almost unchanging social world and are typically very suspicious of change. In the modern world, however, we accept change as the norm. We are seeking new things, looking forward to the future rather than the past, and we expect constant improvements in our material environment.

[E] The pace of technological change has implications for every area of society. Medical advances have lengthened life expectancy and cut down the death rate. Innovations in industrial technology displace thousands of workers and make recently manufactured machinery out of date within a few years. Cultural activities are transformed through such innovations as radio, television, and record players.

[F] People require long years of training and education if they are to function effectively in a highly technological society, and increasingly they need reeducation later in life if they are to keep up with advances in knowledge and techniques. The socialization process, which in simple societies consists almost entirely of passing the culture of one generation on to the next, becomes both more complex and more inadequate.

21. To function effectively in a highly technological society, people need to undergo extensive training and education for many years.

22. As technology advances faster, social change accelerates accordingly.

23. Traditional societies are resistant to change and prefer a stable social order.

24. Technology, the practical use of scientific knowledge, is a key factor in driving social change.

25. Innovations like radio, television, and record players bring about transformations in cultural activities.

三、阅读理解选择题

In the animal kingdom, weakness can bring about aggression in other animals. This sometimes happens with humans also. But I have found that my weakness brings out the kindness in people see it every day when people hold doors for me, pour cream into my coffee, or help me to put on my coat. And I have discovered that it makes them happy.

From my wheelchair experience, I see the best in people, but sometimes I feel sad because those who appear independent miss the kindness I see daily. They don't get to see this soft side of others. Often, we try every way possible to avoid showing our weakness, which includes a lot of pretending. But only when we stop pretending we're brave or strong do we allow people to show the kindness that's in them.

Last month, when I was driving home on a busy highway, I began to feel unwell and drove more slowly than usual. People behind me began to get impatient and angry, with some speeding up alongside me, horning (按喇叭) or even shouting at me at that moment, I decided to do something I had never done in twenty-four years of driving put on the car flashlights and drove on at a really low speed.

No more angry shouts and no more horns!

When I put on my flashlights, I was saying to the other drivers, "I have a problem here. I am weak and doing the best I can." And everyone understood. Several times, I saw drivers who wanted to pass. They couldn't get around me because of the stream of passing traffic. But instead of getting impatient and angry, they waited, knowing the driver in front of them was in some way weak.

Sometimes situations call for us to act strong and brave even when we don't feel that way. But those are few and far between. More often, it would be better if we don't pretend we feel strong when we feel weak or pretend that we're brave when we're scared.

21. The author has discovered that people will feel happy when _____.

A. they offer their help　　B. they receive others' help

C. they feel others' kindness　　D. they show their weakness

22. The author feels sad sometimes because _____.

A. he has a soft heart　　B. he relies much on others

C. some people pretend to be kind　　D. some people fail to see the kindness in others

23. What did the other drivers do when they saw the flashlights?

A. They speeded up to pass.　　B. They waited with patience.

C. They tried their best to help.　　D. They put on their flashlights too.

24. In this passage, the author advises us to _____.

A. handle problems by ourselves　　B. accept help from others

C. admit our weakness　　D. show our bravery

25. Which of the following is the best title of this passage?

A. A Wheelchair Experience.　　B. Weakness and Kindness.

三、阅读理解选择题

Like most people, I've long understood that I will be judged by my occupation, that my profession is a gauge that people use to see how smart or talented I am. Recently, however, I was disappointed to see that it also decides how I'm treated as a person.

Last year I left a professional position as a small-town reporter and took a job waiting tables. As someone paid to serve food to people, I had customers say and do things to me I suspect they'd never say or do to their most casual acquaintances. One night a man talking on his cell phone waved me away, then beckoned (示意) me back with his finger minute later, complaining he was ready to order and asking where I'd been.

I had waited tables during summers in college and was treated like a peon (勤杂工) plenty of people. But at 19 years old, I believed I deserved inferior treatment from professional adults. Besides, people responded to me differently after I told them I was in college. Customers would joke that one day I'd be sitting at their table, waiting to be served.

Once I graduated I took a job at a community newspaper. From my first day, I heard a respectful tone from everyone who called me. I assumed this was the way the professional world worked — cordially.

I soon found out differently. I sat several feet away from an advertising sales representative with a similar name. Our calls would often get mixed up and someone asking for Kristen would be transferred to Christie. The mistake was immediately evident. Perhaps it was because money was involved, but people used a tone with Kristen that they never used with me.

My job title made people treat me with courtesy. So it was a shock to return to the restaurant industry.

It's no secret that there's a lot to put up with when waiting tables, and fortunately, much of it can be easily forgotten when you pocket the tips. The service industry, by definition, exists to cater to others' needs. Still, it seemed that many of my customers didn't get the difference between server and servant.

I'm now applying to graduated school, which means someday I'll return to a profession where people need to be nice to me in order to get what they want, I think I'll take them to dinner first, and see how they treat someone whose only job is to serve them.

A. Some customers simply show no respect to those who serve them.

B. People absorbed in a phone conversation tend to be absent-minded.

C. Waitresses are often treated by customers as casual acquaintances.

D. Some customers like to make loud complaints for no reason at all.

28. How did the author feel when waiting tables at the age of 19?

A. She felt it unfair to be treated as a mere servant by professional.

B. She felt badly hurt when her customers regarded her as a peon.

C. She was embarrassed each time her customers joked with her.

D. She found it natural for professionals to treat her as inferior.

29. What does the author imply by saying "…many of my customers didn't get the difference between server and servant"(Para.7)?

A. Those who cater to others' needs are destined to be looked down upon.

B. Those working in the service industry shouldn't be treated as servants.

C. Those serving others have to put up with rough treatment to earn a living.

D. The majority of customers tend to look on a servant as server nowadays.

Exercise 1

Passage 1

Have you ever wondered where the first doughnut (炸面圈)was made? Who thought up the idea of a fried cake with a hole in the center?

No one knows for sure who made the first doughnut. Some people think that doughnut probably began in the 1800s as Dutch “olykoeks” or “oily cakes”. In those days, a cook would not want to waste any scraps of food. Leftover pieces of bread dough (生面团) were put into hot oil and fried. Olykoeks were tasty on the outside, but soft and uncooked in the center.

Some people say that the mother of a New England sea captain invented the first real doughnut. Her name was Elizabeth Gregory. She replaced the soft center with spices and nuts. But, Elizabeth’s son, Captain Gregory, did not like nuts. He punched out the center, and the consequence was the first hole in a doughnut.

Others say the real story is that Captain Gregory had difficulty steering his ship while trying to eat doughnut. He asked the ship’s cook to make his doughnuts with holes so he could hang them on the steering wheel! Others think that Captain Gregory saw holed cakes in Europe and brought the idea back to America with him.

During WORLD WAR I, homesick American soldiers in Europe were served doughnuts by the Salvation Army. These brave women volunteering for the job were called “Doughnut Girls”. They often worked in dangerous conditions near the soldiers, so the Doughnut Girls wore helmets and uniforms. The women made doughnut cutters out of a large can with a smaller can inside it to cut out the hole. They could set up a kettle of hot oil to fry the dough almost anywhere.

In the 1920s, doughnut machines were invented. Doughnuts were produced faster and easier than ever before. Still, many people preferred to make their favorite doughnuts at home.

1. The passage is mainly about _____.

A. the popularity of doughnuts

B. the history of doughnuts

Passage 2

Nonverbal (非语言的) communication has to do with gestures, movements and closeness of two people when they are talking. The scientists say that those gestures, movements and so on have meaning which words do not carry.

For example, the body distance between two speakers can be important. North Americans often complain that South Americans are unfriendly because they tend to stand close to the North American when speaking, while the South American often considers the North American to be “cold” or “distant” because he keeps a greater distance between himself and the person he is speaking to. The “eye contact” provides another example of what we are calling nonverbal communication. Scientists have observed that there is more eye contact between people who like each other than there is between people who don't like each other. The length of time that the person whom you are speaking to looks at your eyes indicates the amount of interest he has in the things you are talking about.

On the other hand, too long a gaze can make people uncomfortable. The eyes apparently play a great part in nonverbal communication. Genuine warmth or interest, shyness or confidence can often be seen in the eyes. We do not always consider a smile to be a sign of friendliness. Someone who is always smiling, and with little apparent reasons, often makes us uneasy.

6. According to the passage, nonverbal communication_____.

A. is a method often used by people who cannot speak

B. can tell something that words cannot

C. can be used to talk with people who cannot bear

D. is less used than words

7. The South American_____.

A. tends to keep a distance between himself and the person he is speaking to

B. usually stands close to the person he is talking to

C. is often unfriendly when spoken to

D. is often cold and distant when speaking

8. Which of the following is NOT true?

A. Less eye contact suggests distance in relation.

B. The longer one looks at you, the more interest he has in you.

C. There is more eye contact between people who like each other.

D. Shorter eye contact shows more interest in what one is talking about

9. Too long a gaze_____.

A. may upset people being looked at

B. shows one’s great confidence

C. indicates one’s interest in the talk

D. tells you how friendly one is

10. Constant smiling without apparent reason_____.

A. is a sign of one’s friendliness

B. is a sign of one’s unfriendliness

Passage 3

Some students who are not fluent in the language find that in the early stages of their course there are frequent breakdowns in communication. There are, of course, many possible explanations for this. The student may not have a sufficient command over the grammar and vocabulary of English to enable him to express himself clearly. He may, on the other hand, have a poor pronunciation. Factors such as these, of course, require urgent and persistent attention on the part of the student. But a very frequent cause of misunderstanding in discussion sessions and one which can much more easily be put right, is the teacher's uncertainty whether his students has, in fact, asked a question at all. What often happens is as follows. The student, puzzled about a particular point, decides to ask a question. As so often happens when under pressure, he tends to concentrate most of his attention on the subject matter and he pays practically no attention to the language. Consequently he fails to employ the correct question form. For example, he may use a statement form instead. The result is predictable. The teacher interprets the intended question as a comment. He then either agrees or disagrees with it, or he continues with what he was saying before. However, even when the student does employ a proper question form, difficulties may still arise. The teacher may not know, for example, what the source of the student's difficulties is.

Causes of Breakdowns in 11._____

On students' part

—insufficient command over the 12._____ of English

—poor pronunciation

On teacher's part

—uncertainty of whether his student has asked a question

—the student 13._____ to employ the correct question form; the teacher interprets the question as a comment

—difficulties arise when the student employs 14._____ question form

—the teacher may not know about the 15._____ of the student's difficulty

Exercise 2

Passage 1

Smoking contributes to so many cancers, diseases and deaths. The costs to individuals, families and society are enormous.

That's why the next community Healthy Living Project focuses on smoking and tobacco. A "Healthy Living Today, Not Tomorrow" community project started last fall that focused on healthy eating and physical activity.

Starting today, the community will report on smoking and its related issues. Every Wednesday—and other times from now until February—we will provide stories on everything from smoking cessation (停止) to second-hand smoke.

The series of stories will be broken down into five stages—looking at the costs and consequences of smoking and the addiction, smoking cessation, the different age groups of smokers, the impact of second-hand smoke, smoking policies in public places and workplaces and prevent teens from starting in the first place.

OK, I know there are smokers' thoughts: "Just leave me alone", "We're always treated badly or at least picked on" and "Besides, we have a right to smoke at any place we want; we have rights".

The series is not an attempt to "pick on" smokers, but an opportunity for a community discussion and offer support for smokers. It is a serious attempt to look at smoking—the addiction and the consequences.

A. smoking and related issues

B. smoking cessation

C. results of smoking and addiction

D. healthy eating and physical activity

3. We may infer from the passage that some smokers _____.

A. have a right to smoke at any place they want

B. are complaining about being prevented from smoking

C. are being helped to quit smoking by the community

D. are being treated badly when they are smoking

4. Whether the healthy Living Together Project would succeed mainly depends on _____.

A. doctors’ contributions

B. the work of the community

C. smokers’ support

D. the support of the media

5. What can we learn from the passage?

A. Smoking affects patients greatly.

B. Stopping smoking can cure any disease.

C. Many cancers and diseases are related to smoking.

D. Smoking costs a person little money.

Passage 2

It is a blow for the Ugly Bettys and Plain Janes --- research shows that good looks lead to better pay. A study of 4,000 young men and women found that beauty boosted pay checks more than intelligence. Those judged to be the more attractive earned up to 10 percent more than their less attractive friends and colleagues. Applied to the average salary of £25,000 a year, the "plainness penalty (处罚)" would make a difference of £2,500 a year --- or around £50 a week.

It is unclear what is behind the phenomenon, but it may be that beauty creates confidence. The self-confident may appear to be doing better than they are and will not hesitate about asking for a pay rise.

Researcher, Jason Fletcher, of Yale University in the U.S., rated the attractiveness of the 4,000 men and women. Just over half were judged average, while 7 percent were felt to be very attractive and 8 percent were judged unattractive or very unattractive. The volunteers also sat an IQ test and reported their salary. It became clear that pay scales were far from fair. For instance, a 14-point increase on the IQ score was associated with a 3 to 6 percent increase in wage. But being of above average looks increased pay by 5 to 10 percent.

For a plain person to be paid the same as a very attractive one, they would have to be 40 percent brighter, the journal Economics Letters reports.

Dr. Fletcher said: "The results do show that people's looks have an impact on their wages and it can be very important."

6. What is the "plainness penalty"?

A. To be paid less for being ordinarily-looking.

B. To be laughed at for being ordinarily-looking.

C. To be fired for being ordinarily-looking.

D. To be questioned for being ordinarily-looking.

7. What's the average annual salary of a good-looking person?

A. £2,500 B. £25,000 C. £22,500 D. 27,500

8. Good-looking people are usually paid more probably because _____.

A. they look smarter

B. they have higher degrees

C. they are better at pleasing others

D. they are more confident

9. How many people were rated as very attractive in Jason Fletcher's study?

A. About 280 B. About 4,000 C. About 2,000 D. About 320

10. Which of the following best summarizes the main idea of the passage?

A. IQ is less important than appearance.

B. Confidence makes people prettier.

Passage 3

Host Family Accommodation

Host family accommodation, or living with host families, remains popular among language travel students for its unique advantages. These days, host families are trying to offer more in terms of quality, for they still have something to worry about.

Host family accommodation is often seen as the number - one choice for its advantages in language study, cultural communication and cost of living. Staying alongside host families enables students to get enough practice for the short time of their studying so that their language acquisition is likely to become faster. Living in host families also has the advantage for students of being able to spend a lot of time communicating with their "host parents", and get the local way of life, people and culture. Another advantage is that host family accommodation can sometimes be the least expensive. It attracts students for it ensures them a family - type of living at a low cost.

The advantages, however, have not prevented host families from worrying. On one hand, some host families are losing their unique selling point. The problem is that the majority of hosts in big cities, now generally single and young, have less time available for students but the selling point for host family accommodation is communication practice. One the other hand, students' expectations have risen. They are becoming more demanding and asking for more than ever from their accommodation, as they come mainly from high socio - economic groups in their own countries.

To get out of the difficult situation, host families are now making efforts to improve the quality of service. They are trying to make living conditions better, including broadband Internet service, private bathroom, and access to plenty of hot water for long showers. They are also providing students with structured family activities.

It is believed that host family accommodation will keep the popularity vote with language travel students.

Passage 4

【A】By the year 2050 it is estimated that the world's population could have increased to around 12 billion. Of these, some 60 percent will live within 60 km of the sea. The agricultural and industrial activities required to support this population will increase the already significant pressures on fertile coastal areas. Death and disease caused by polluted coastal waters costs the global economy US $12.8 billion a year. Plastic waste kills up to 1 million sea birds, 100,000 sea mammals and countless fish each year.

【B】One significant impact of human activity is marine pollution. The most visible and familiar is oil pollution caused by tanker accidents and tank washing at sea, and in addition to the gross visible short - term impacts, severe long - term problems can also result. In the case of the Exxon Valdez which ran onto a shore in Alaska in 1989, biological impacts from the oil spill can still be identified 15 years after the event. The Prestige which sank off the Spanish coast late in 2002, resulted in huge economic losses as it polluted more than 100 beaches in France and Spain and effectively destroyed the local fishing industry.

【C】Despite the scale and visibility of such impacts, the total quantities of pollutants entering the sea from the long line of catastrophic oil spills appeared small compared with those of pollutants introduced directly and indirectly from other sources, including domestic sewage, industrial discharges, leakages from waste tips, urban and industrial run - off, accidents, spillages, explosions, sea dumping operations, oil production, mining, agriculture nutrients and pesticides, waste heat sources, and radioactive discharges. Land - based sources are estimated to account for around 44 percent of the pollutants entering the sea and atmospheric inputs account for an estimated 33 percent. By contrast, transport on the sea accounts for 12 percent.

【D】The impacts of pollution vary. Nutrient pollution from sewage discharges and agriculture can result in unsightly and possibly dangerous "blooms" of algae (藻类) in coastal waters. As these blooms die and decay they use up the oxygen in the water. This has led, in some areas, to"creeping dead zones" (CDZ), where oxygen dissolved in the water fails to levels unable to sustain marine life. Industrial pollution also contributes to these dead zones.

【E】Radioactive (放射性的) pollution has many causes, including the normal operation of nuclear power stations, but by far the single biggest sources of man - made - radioactive elements in the sea are the nuclear fuel reprocessing plants at La Hague in France and at Sellafield in the UK. Waste released from them has resulted in the widespread pollution of living marine resources over a wide area; radioactive elements traceable to reprocessing can be found in seaweeds as far away as the West Greenland Coast.

【F】Trace metal pollution from metal mining, production and processing industries can damage the health of marine plants and animals and render some sea foods unfit for human consumption. The contribution of human activities can be very significant: the amount of mercury introduced into the environment by industrial activities is around four times the amount released through natural processes such as weathering and erosion (腐蚀).

16. About one - third of the pollutants entering the sea come from atmospheric inputs.

20. Plastic waste kills plenty of sea birds and sea mammals every year.

Passage 1

Finally, the Christmas season is over. We can take a long breath, put up our feet, sip from a cup of good tea and relax. The frenzy, starting from Black Friday right after Thanksgiving until Christmas Eve, of gift shopping, buying, wrapping, giving, receiving, opening, returning...is exhaustive and time-consuming, but it takes place every year.

There is considerable difference between the cultures in China and western countries when it comes to gift giving. In China, it is not polite to open a gift in front of the gift giver, and the gift is only looked at after the guest has left. Here in America, gift givers always wrap their gifts, large or small, priceless or valueless, carefully and decorate them with colorful ribbons and little pretty paper flowers; and the lucky receiver is expected to open the gift right away in front of the giver, with great eagerness and curiosity, and should always express appreciation with the all time truthful comment, “This is just exactly what I always wanted!” well, as a matter of fact, most people would take their “always wanted” gifts back to the store to exchange for something they really wanted.

Finding a gift for somebody, even a close family member, you’ll have to know what the person likes and shop for days before you can locate the perfect gift. But, still the person may not like the gift from you. Nowadays, stores would provide two copies of the receipts for anything they sell as a gift, one of which is included in the gift packaged so that the receiver can come back for an exchange. I know, it was unthinkable to cash out gift you get, but, times are different. Another good way to avoid all that shopping hassle is to purchase a gift card from one of the stores and send it to your niece, nephews, or a family member, so that they can get whatever they want or even keep the money.

1. Finding a gift for somebody is a(n)_____.
A. easy job
B. tough task
C. must-be job
D. arranged task
2. It is quite _____ for Chinese people to open the gift in front of the givers.

Passage 2

Human needs seem endless. When a human gets a meal, he begins to think about an overcoat, when a manager gets a new sports car, a big house and pleasure boats dance into view. The needs of mankind are thought to be made up several levels. When there is money enough to satisfy one level of needs, another level appears.

The first and most basic level of needs involves food. Once this level is satisfied, the second level of needs, clothing and some sort of shelter, appears. By the end of World War II, these needs were satisfied for a great majority of Americans. Then a third level appeared. It included such items as automobiles and new houses. By 1957 or 1958 this third level of needs was fairly well satisfied. Then, in the late 1950s, a fourth level of needs appeared: the "life-enriching" level. While the other levels involve physical satisfaction, that is, the need in comfort, safety, and transportation, this level stresses mental needs for recognition, achievement, and happiness. It includes a variety of goods and services, many of which could be called "luxury" items. Among them are vacation trips, the best medical and dental care, and recreation. Also included here are fancy goods and the latest styles in clothing. On the fourth level, a lot of money is spent on services, while on the first three levels more is spent on goods. Will consumers raise their sights to a fifth level of needs as their income increases, or will they continue to demand luxuries and personal services on the fourth level?

A fifth level would probably involve needs that can be achieved best by community action. Consumers may be spending more on taxes to pay for government action against disease, ignorance, crime, and prejudice. After filling our stomachs, our clothes closets, our garages, our teeth, and our minds, we now may seek to ensure the health, safety, and leisure to enjoy more fully the good things on the first four levels.

6. According to the passage, man will begin to think about such needs as housing and clothing only when _____.

A. he has saved up enough money

B. he has grown dissatisfied with his simple shelter

C. he has satisfied his hunger

D. he has learned to build houses

7. It can be inferred from the passage that by the end of World War II, most Americans _____.

A. were very rich

B. lived in poverty

C. had the good things on the first three levels

D. did not own automobiles

8. Which of the following is NOT related to "physical satisfaction"?

A. A successful career B. A cozy home C. A good meal D. A family car

9. What is the main concern of man on the fourth level?

A. The more goods the better

B. The more mental satisfaction the better

C. The more "luxury" items the better

D. The more earnings the better

10. The author tends to think that the fifth level _____.

A. would be little better than the fourth level

B. may be a lot more desirable than the first four

C. can be the last and most satisfying level

D. will become attainable before the government takes actions

Passage 3

Scientists are racing to build the world's first thinking robot. This is not science fiction: some say they will have made it by the year 2020, Carol Packer reports.

Machines that walk, speak and feel are no longer science fiction. Kismet is the name of an android (机器人) which scientists have built at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). Kismet is different from the tradition robot because it can show human emotions. Its eyes, ears and lips move to show when it feels happy, sad or bored. Kismet is one of the first of a new generation of androids-robots that look like human beings, which can imitate human feelings. Cog, another android invented by the MIT, imitates the action of a mother. However, scientists admit that so far Cog has the mental ability of a two-year-old child.

The optimists say that by the year 2020 we will have created humanoids (机器人) with brains similar to those of an adult human being. These robots will be designed to look like people to make them more attractive and easier to sell to the public. What kind of jobs will they do? In the future, robots like Robonaut, a humanoid invented by NASA, will be doing dangerous jobs, like repairing space stations. They will also be doing more and more of the household work for us. In Japan, scientists are designing androids that will entertain US by dancing and playing the piano.

Some people worry about what the future holds: will robots become monsters? Will people themselves become increasingly like robots? Experts predict that more and more people will be wearing micro-computers, connected to the Internet, in the future. People will have micro-chips in various parts of their body, which will connect them to a wide variety of gadgets (小装置). Perhaps we should not exaggerate(夸大) the importance of technology, but one wonders whether, in years to come, we will still be falling in love, and whether we will still feel pain. Who knows?

The optimists say that we will have created humanoids with brains which ___13___ those of an adult human being by the year 2020.
In the future, robots like Robonant, a humanoid invented by NASA, will be doing dangerous jobs, for example, they may ___14___ stations.

Passage 4

【A】Since Steve Jobs resigned as chief executive of Apple, much has been said about him as a peerless business leader who has created immense wealth for shareholders, and guided the design of hit products that are transforming entire industries, like music and mobile communications.

【B】 All true, but let's think different, to borrow the Apple marketing slogan of years back. Let's look at Mr. Jobs as a role model.

【C】 Above all, he is an innovator (创新者). His creative force is seen in products such as the iPod, iPhone, and iPad, and in new business models for pricing and distributing music and mobile software online. Studies of innovation come to the same conclusion: you can't engineer innovation, but you can increase the odds of it occurring. And Mr. Jobs' career can be viewed as a consistent pursuit of improving those odds, both for himself and the companies he has led. Mr. Jobs, of course, has enjoyed singular success. But innovation, broadly defined, is the crucial ingredient in all economic progress--higher growth for nations, more competitive products for companies, and more prosperous careers for individuals. And Mr. Jobs, many experts say, exemplifies what works in the innovation game.

【D】 "We can look at and learn from Steve Jobs what the essence of American innovation is," says John

Kao, an innovation consultant to corporations and governments. Many other nations, Mr. John Kao notes, are now ahead of the United States in producing what are considered the raw materials of innovation. These include government financing for scientific research, national policies to support emerging industries, educational achievement, engineers and scientists graduated, even the speeds of Internet broadband service.

【E】Yet what other nations typically lack, Mr. Kao adds, is a social environment that encourages diversity, experimentation, risk-taking, and combining skills from many fields into products that he calls "recombinant mash-ups (打碎重组)," like the iPhone, which redefined the smartphone category. "The culture of other countries doesn't support the kind of innovation that Steve Jobs exemplifies, as America does," Mr. John Kao says.

【F】Workers of every rank are told these days that wide-ranging curiosity and continuous learning are vital to thriving in the modern economy. Formal education matters, career counselors say, but real- life experience is often even more valuable.

【G】The academics identify five traits that are common to the disruptive innovators: questioning, experimenting, observing, associating and networking. Their bundle of characteristics echoes the ceaseless curiosity and willingness to take risks noted by other experts. Networking, Mr. Hal Gregersen explains, is less about career-building relationships than a consistent search for new ideas. Associating, he adds, is the ability to make idea-producing connections by linking concepts from different disciplines.

16. Many governments have done more than the US government in providing the raw materials for innovation.
17. Great innovators are good at connecting concepts from various academic fields.
18. Innovation is vital to driving economic progress.
19. America has a social environment that is particularly favorable to innovation.
20. Real-life experience is often more important than formal education for career success.

Exercise 4

Passage 1

If American children have to use mosquito ringtone (静音) of cell phones at school, a university in Japan is doing the opposite: giving cell phones to students. And not just any cell phone-the iPhone 3G.

According to Asiajin, about 550 students and staff members in the School of Social Informatics at Tokyo-based university Aoyama Gakuin received the iPhone 3G for free as part of their study materials.

This is the result of a deal that Aoyama Gakuin signed with SoftBank, the only sales representative of the iPhone in Japan. The number of students using the iPhone is expected to reach about 1, 000. This is the first time a particular cell phone has been used on such a huge scale at a Japanese university.

The phone will work as a study tool for students. As it comes with the global positioning system (GPS), the university plans to use it to check student attendance. Dropping classes is a big problem in Japan, where regular attendance is an important factor in determining a student's grade. Students often fake attendance by getting classmates to answer roll calls.

Now, with the iPhone 3G, the school plans to keep better tabs on (监控) its students. Students are allowed to use the phone for attendance reporting (but only if they are actually in the classroom, a fact that will be proved by the phone's GPS),lecture podcasting, and online examinations. A student can't answer the roll call using the phone from any location other than the classroom.

Students can, of course, still cheat the new system by leaving their phones with fellow classmates, but this is not very likely to happen, as people tend to keep a lot of private information on their phones that they don't want to share with others.

As for calling and data plans, the university covers the basic fee. The hardware itself is free, but students will have to pay when they exceed downloading limits.

1. According to the passage, American children are_____at school.

A. encouraged to use cell phones

B. not encouraged to use cell phones

C. offered a new type of free cell phones

D. allowed to use free cell phones

2. Which of the following statements is NOT true of the School of Social Informatics?

A. Students receive the iPhone 3G for free

B. Students use the iPhone 3G as a study tool

C. Students have received the iPhone 3G before

D. Students can save private information on the iPhone 3G

3. Which of the following problems might be solved by using the iPhone 3G?

A. Fake attendance reported by classmates

B. Failure of on-line examinations

C. Answer to roll calls at school

D. High cost of telephoning

4. The following functions of the iPhone 3G are mentioned in the text EXCEPT_____.

A. attendance reporting　　B. lecture podcasting

C. online examinations　　D. downloading payment

5. This passage is mainly about_____.

A. the uses of the iPhone 3G at a Japanese university

B. the advantages of the iPhone 3G in Japanese universities

C. the control of dropping classes in a Japanese school

D. the use of GPS to locate students at school generous with their praise. In short they make the best managers, and if men are to keep up they will have to start learning form their female counterparts, a report claims today.

The survey of 1,000 male and female middle and senior managers from across the UK is an indictment of the ability of men to function as leaders in the modern workplace.

A majority of those questioned believed women had a more modern outlook on their profession and were more open minded and considerate. By way of contrast, a similar number believe male managers are egocentric and more likely to steal credit for work done by others.

Management today magazine, which conducted the research, said that after years of having to adopt a masculine identity and hide their emotions and natural behavior in the workplace, women have become role models for managers.

The findings tally with a survey of female bosses carried out in the US. a five-year study of 2,500 managers from 450 firms found that many male bosses were rated by their staff of both sexes to be self-obsessed and autocratic. Women on the other hand leave men in the starting blocks when it comes to teamwork and communicating with staff.

In Britain more than 61% of those surveyed said men did not make better bosses than women. Female managers use time more effectively, with many of those surveyed commenting that juggling commitments is a familiar practice for women with a home and a family. Female managers also appear to make good financial sense for penny-pinching companies: most people, of either sex, would rather ask for a rise from a man.

6. What is the source of the data mentioned in the passage?

A. A magazine　　B. newspaper

C. government white paper　　D. university Journal

7. According to the passage, male manager tend to _____.

A. be more selfless in teamwork　　B. ask more questions when surveyed

C. be considerate leaders in company　　D. claim the contribution

8. What can be found after comparing the findings in the UK and US?

A. The findings are irrelevant　　B. The findings are contradictory

C. The findings match each other　　D. The findings are not significant

9. What does the phrase “penny-pinching companies” means?

A. Companies that lack money

B. Companies that are very generous

C. Companies that earn a lot of money

D. Companies that are unwilling to use money.

10. What’s the main idea of the passage?

A. Men are better managers than women

Passage 3

Many people believe the glare from snow causes snow-blindness. Yet, dark glasses or not, they find themselves suffering from headaches and watering eyes, and even snow-blindness, when exposed to several hours of "snow light".

The United States Army has now determined that glare from snow does not cause snow-blindness in troops in a snow-covered country. Rather, a man's eyes frequently find nothing to focus on in a broad expanse of barren snow-covered terrain. So his gaze continually shifts and jumps back and forth over the entire landscape in search of something to look at. Finding nothing, hour after hour, the eyes never stop searching and the eyeballs become sore and the eye muscles ache. Nature eases this irritation by producing more fluid which covers the eyeball. The fluid covers the eyeball in increasing quantity until vision blurs, then is obscured, and the result is total, even though temporary, snow-blindness.

Experiments led the Army to a simple method of overcoming this problem. Scouts ahead of a main body of troops are trained to shake snow from evergreen bushes, creating a dotted line as they cross completely snow-covered landscape. Even the scouts themselves throw lightweight, dark colored objects ahead on which they too can focus. The men following can then see something. Their gaze is arrested. Their eyes focus on a bush and having found something to see, stop scouring the snow-blanketed landscape. By focusing their attention on one object at a time, the men can cross the snow without becoming hopelessly snow-blind or lost. In this way the problem of crossing a solid white terrain is overcome.

The United States Army announced that glare from snow does not lead to ___11___ in troops in a snow-covered country.

The eyes find nothing to focus on and the eyes never stop searching. As a result, ___12___ get sore and the eye muscles ache.

The fluid covers the eyeball in___13___ until vision blurs, then is obscured, and the result is snow blindness.

Scouts of troops are trained to shake snow from evergreen bushes in order to create ___14___ as they cross completely snow-covered landscape.

The men can cross the snow without becoming ___15___ or lost by focusing on one object at a time.

【A】Are you open to new experiences? Are you a risk taker? Do you like parties? Questions like these were not part of your last doctor's appointment. But one day they might be a growing body of research suggests that your personality can influence your health. And some experts think changing people's personal traits might one day help treat diseases, or keep people from getting them in the first place.

specifically to you.

【C】For a study published in the journal Psych neuroendocrinology, Kavita Vedhara and her co-authors gave personality tests to 121 people, and tested their blood to analyze the expression of genes related to inflammation. They found that the personality trait of extroversion was associated with increased expression of genes promoting inflammation. Meanwhile, conscientiousness, which the authors define as a trait "reflecting painfulness, caution, and harm avoidance," was associated with decreased expression of pro-inflammatory genes. Since inflammation can be part of the body's response to infection, higher expression of pro-inflammatory genes can mean a more active immune system; lower expression can mean a relatively less active one.

【D】It could be, the authors write, that people with weak immune systems become more introverted to protect themselves from infection meet fewer people, get fewer germs. They might become more conscientious for the same reason. On the other hand, it's possible that people's personalities affect their gene expression — people who go to a lot of fun, germy parties or who are really bad at washing their hands might start to undergo gene-expression changes that strengthen their immune systems.

【E】This doesn't mean everybody should get a personality test, Dr. Vedhara told Op-Talk. But it does suggest that in general, a treatment approach that considers the patient's psychological profile may be more effective than one that just looks at physical symptoms.

【F】"If you're confronted with a chronic condition" like diabetes or heart disease, she explained, "you may well have underlying beliefs about your condition which influence how likely you are to engage with treatment, you might have an emotional response to that condition which might influence your underlying physiology and your ability to recover or to manage your disease, you may well have an orientation which makes you more or less likely to exercise" — and looking at all of those factors as well as the physical manifestations of the condition itself might help doctors treat it better.

【G】"Most areas of medical intervention work quite well," she said, "but I think that we're on the brink of seeing a future where we use psychological interventions and behavioral interventions to maximize their efficacy."

【H】Joshua Jackson, a psychology professor at Washington University, also sees understanding personality as a way to improve physical health. In a recent study, he and his co-authors looked at personality and longevity — or, more specifically, at how your friends' assessments of your personality might predict how long you'll live. They found that men whose friends thought they were conscientious and open tended to live longer than those whose friends found them less so; for women, the traits associated with longer life were agreeableness and emotional stability. And friends' assessments of subjects' personalities were better than their own self-reports at predicting how long they would live.

16. How your friends evaluate your character may foretell how long you'll live.

17. Some experts predict that the change of people's personal traits might be used to help treat diseases in the future.

Exercise 5

Passage 1

Everyone knows that laziness is not good. We have probably all had lectures telling that laziness is immoral, that it is wasteful, and that lazy people will never gain anything in life. But laziness can be more harmful than that, and it is often caused by more complex reasons. Some people who appear to be lazy are suffering from much more serious problems. They may not trust their fellow workers and they are unable to join in any group task for fear of being laughed at or for fear of having their ideas stolen. These people who seem lazy may be affected by a fear of failure that prevents successful work. Some people are so busy planning great deals that they are unable to deal with "easier" work on hand. Still others are not avoiding work; strictly speaking, they are simply putting of their work.

Laziness, however, can actually be helpful. Some people may look lazy while they are really thinking, planning and researching. We should all remember that great scientific discoveries happened by chance. Newton wasn't working on the farm when the apple hit him and he devised the theory of gravity. All of us would like to have someone "lazy" build the car we buy, particularly if that "laziness" were caused by the worker's taking time to check each step of his work and to do his job right. And sometimes, being "lazy" - that is, taking time of for a rest is good for the overworked students or executives. Taking a rest can be particularly helpful to the sportsman who is trying too hard or the doctor who is simply working himself overtime too many evenings in the hospital. So be careful when you want to call someone lazy. That person may be thinking, resting, or planning his or her next work.

1. The main idea of this passage is that_____.
A. laziness is a bad habit that everyone wants to get rid of
B. there are advantages and disadvantages in being lazy
C laziness is the sign of very serious emotional problems
D. lazy people usually do their work more carefully
2. Which of the following statements is mentioned in the passage?
A. Laziness is a kind of mental disease
B. Laziness is more beneficial than harmful
C. Laziness cannot be explained

Passage 2

It is difficult to imagine what life will be like without memory. The meanings of thousands of everyday perceptions, the bases for the decisions we make, and the roots of our habits and skills are to be found in our past experiences, which are brought into the present by memory.

Memory can be defined as the capacity to keep information available for later use. It includes not only “remembering” things like arithmetic or historical facts, but also involves any change in the way an animal typically behaves. Memory is involved when a rat gives up eating grain because he has sniffed something suspicious in the grain pile.

Memory exists not only in humans and animals but also in some physical objects and machines. Computers, for example, contain devices from storing data for later use. It is interesting to compare the memory-storage capacity of a computer with that of a human being. The instant-access memory of a large computer may hold up to 100,000 “words”-ready for instant use. An average U. S. teenager probably recognizes the meaning of about 100,000 words of English. However, this is but a fraction(部分、片断) of the total amount of information which the teenager has stored. Consider, for example, the number of faces and places that the teenager can recognize on sight.

The use of words is the basis of the advanced problem-solving intelligence of human beings. A large part of a person’s memory is in terms of words and combinations of words. But while language greatly expands the number and the kind of things a person can remember it also requires a huge memory capacity. It may well be this capacity that distinguishes humans, setting them apart from other animals.

6. According to the passage, memory is considered to be _____.

A. the basis for decision making and problem solving

B. an ability to store experiences of future use

C. an intelligence typically possessed by human beings

D. the data mainly consisting of words and combinations of words

7. The comparison made between the memory capacity of a large computer and that of a human being shows that_____.

A. the computer’s memory has a little bigger capacity than a teenager’s

B. the computer’s memory capacity is much smaller than an adult human being’s

Passage 3

Washington's National Park Fund was founded in 1993 by a group of enthusiastic parks people who wanted to establish support for our beautiful parks in Washington State. As a non-profit organization, the Fund is the official non-profit partner supporting Mount Rainer, North Cascades, and Olympic National Parks; we are ensuring the presentation of national beauty, cultural heritage (遗产) , and continued enjoyment for all. Over the past six years, Washington's National Park Fund has given back more than $ 2 billion to Mount Rainer, North Cascades, and Olympic National Parks.

How You Can Help

Purchase a National Park license plate; $28 of each plate purchased comes back to the parks (more than 137,000 is generated by this program each year!)

Support the parks through your company's matching gift program. Get a work crew from your company together to volunteer. Provide in-kind goods (实物商品) from your company to the parks through Washington's National Park Fund.

Volunteer your time at one of Mount Rainer, North Cascades, and Olympic National Parks (information can be found on each park's website).

Passage 4

【A】The U.S. Department of Labor statistics indicate that there is an oversupply of college-trained workers and that this oversupply is increasing. Already there is an overabundance of teachers, engineers, physicists and other specialists.

【B】Yet colleges and graduate schools continue every year to turn out highly trained people to compete for jobs that aren't there. The result is that graduates cannot enter the professions for which they were trained and must take temporary jobs which do not require a college degree. These "temporary" jobs have a habit of becoming permanent.

【C】On the other hand, there is a tremendous need for skilled workers of all sorts: carpenters, electricians, mechanics, and TV repairmen. These people have more work than they can handle and their annual incomes are often higher than those of college graduates.

【D】The old distinction that white-collar workers make a better living than blue collar workers no longer holds true. The reason for this situation is the traditional myth that a college degree is a passport to a prosperous future. Parents begin telling their children this myth before they are out of grade school.

【E】 Under this pressure the kids fall in line. Whether they want to go to college or not doesn't matter. Everybody should go to college. One result of this emphasis on a college education is that many people go to college who do not belong there.

【F】Of the sixty per cent of high school graduates who enter college, half of them do not graduate with their class. Many of them drop out within the first year. Some struggle on for two or three years and then give up.

16. Almost half of 60% graduates don't graduate with their class, or even most of them drop out or give up.

17. U.S. Department of Labor Statistics show that there is an oversupply of labor force and this oversupply is increasing.

18. Compared with college graduates, some skilled workers have more work and can earn more money every year.

19. The fact that in the past the life of the white collar is better than the blue collar is not true anymore today.

20.Graduates cannot find their suitable position which they have trained and may take temporary jobs without degree requirement.

Exercise 6

Passage 1

You might not pay much attention to whether the things you say on WeChat and other online messaging apps are recorded. But a regulation (规定) that went into effect on May 1 will make everything you say online usable against you in a court of law (法庭).

According to the Supreme People's Court's regulation, text messages, emails, and content posted on websites or instant (即时的) messaging platforms can be used as evidence (证据) in civil lawsuits (民事诉讼).

The idea of digital evidence was first introduced as part of China's Civil Procedure Law in 2012. However, the recent regulation has made it clearer.

"This is the first time the Supreme People's Court has clarified (阐明) the scope of digital evidence, especially on social media platforms and instant messaging services," Li Ya, a lawyer in Beijing, told China Daily.

The regulation was introduced to keep up with changes in social development. Social media activity has become a part of most people's lives. Therefore, digital evidence is playing an increasingly important role in civil and criminal lawsuits.

According to the regulation, if people plan to use digital evidence in a lawsuit, they have to first prove that they use the app or website that the evidence comes from. Second, they must provide an original (原始的) and complete record of the evidence. For example, if you lend somebody money through WeChat, you must keep the original transfer (转账) records and conversations on the app.

However, there are still questions about the regulation. Some point out that the regulation will not necessarily help in every case. "How to make sure a microblog was actually posted by the micro blogger is a challenge," Li said.

1. When was digital evidence first introduced as part of China's Civil Procedure Law ?

A. in 1978　　B. in 2020　　C. in 2012　　D. in 2019

2. Why does the Supreme People's Court make it clear that digital evidence can be used as evidence?

A. Because social media activity has become a part of most people's lives.

B. Because it can help digital industry develop.

C. Because it can reduce criminals.

D. Because it can restrict(限制)the development of media activity.

3. Which of the following is not digital evidence?

A. A chat on QQ

B. A message on WeChat

C. The money lent to your friend through Alipay.

D. A letter posted to your friends through post office.

Passage 2

Technology has been an encouragement of historical change. It acted as such a force in England beginning in the eighteenth century, and across the entire Western World in the nineteenth. Rapid advances were made in the use of scientific findings in the manufacture of goods, which has changed ideas about work. One of the first changes was that other forms of energy have taken the place of human power. Along with this came the increased use of machines to manufacture products in less time.

People also developed machines that could produce the same parts for a product: each nail was exactly like every other nail, meaning that each nail could be changed for every other nail. This means that goods could be produced in large numbers, though mass production required breaking production down into smaller and smaller tasks. Once this was done, workers no longer started on the product and labored to complete it. Instead, they might work only one thousandth of it, other workers completing their own parts in a certain order. There is nothing strange about this manufacturing work by today's standards. Highly skilled workers were unable to compare with the new production techniques, as mass production allowed goods of high standard to be produced in greater number than could ever be done by hand. But the skilled worker wasn't the only loser, the common workers lost too. Similar changes forced farmers away. The increased mechanization (机械化) of agriculture freed masses of workers from ploughing the land and harvesting its crops. They had no choice but to stream toward the rapidly developing industrial centers. Increasingly, standards were set by machines. Workers no longer owned their own tools, their skill was no longer valued, and pride in their work was no longer possible. Workers looked after and repaired the machines that could work faster than humans at greatly reduced cost.

6. In this passage, which of the following is NOT considered as a change caused by the use of scientific findings in the production of goods?

A. Other forms of energy have taken the place of human power.

B. The increased exploitation（剥削）of workers in the 19th century.

C. The increased use of machines to make products in less time.

D. The use of machines producing parts of the same standard.

A. each nail could be taken the place of by every other nail

B. each nail was exactly like every other nail

C. producing tasks became bigger and bigger

D. goods could be considerably produced

9. According to the writer, highly skilled workers _____.

A. completely disappeared with the coming of the factory system

B. were dismissed by the boss

C. were unable to produce goods of high standard

D. were unable to produce fine goods at that same speed as machines

10. According to the passage, what did the farmers have to do with the coming of mechanization of agriculture?

A. Many of them had to leave their farmland for industrial centers.

B. They stuck to their farm work.

C. They refused to use machines.

D. They did their best to learn how to use the machines.

Passage 3

Designing a lens can be compared to playing chess. In chess a player tries to trap his opponent's king in a series of moves. In creating a lens, a lens designer attempts to "trap" light by forcing all the rays arising from a single point in the subject to focus on a single point in the image, as a consequence of their passing through a series of transparent(透明的) elements with precisely curved surfaces. Since in both cases the ultimate goal and the means by which it can be attained are known, one is tempted to think there will be a single best decision at any point along the way. The number of possible consequences flowing from any one decision is so large, however, as to be virtually, if not actually, infinite. Therefore in lens design, as inchess, perfect solutions to a problem are beyond reach. Although this article will be concerned only with the design of photographic lenses, the same principles apply to all lenses.

The lens designer has one enormous advantage over the chess player: the designer is free to call on any available source of help to guide him through the staggering number of possibilities. Most of that help once came from mathematics and physics, but recently computer technology, information theory, chemistry, industrial engineering and psychophysics have all contributed to making the lens designer's job immeasurably more productive. Some of the lenses on the market today were inconceivable a decade ago. Others whose design is as much as a century old can now be mass produced at low cost. With the development of automatic production methods, lenses are made by the millions, both out of glass and out of plastics. Today's lenses are better than the best lenses used by the great photographers of the past. Moreover, their price may lower, in spite of the fact that 19th century craftsmen worked for only a few dollars a week and today's lenses are more complex. The lens designer cannot fail to be grateful for the science and technology that have made his work easier and his creations more widely available, but he is also humbled: it is no longer practical for a fine photographic lens to be designed from beginning to end by a single human mind.

In creating a lens, a lens designer attempts to "trap" light by forcing all the rays arising from a single point in the subject to concentrate on__11__in the image. The number of possible consequences flowing __12__is so large, however, as to be virtually, if not actually, infinite.

The same principals__13__all lenses, although this article and the design of photographic lenses will have close connection with each other.

The designer receives help from mathematics and physics. In addition, designer's job has become more productive and immeasurable recently because of computer technology, information theory, chemistry,__14__ and psychophysics.

Thanks to the automatic __15__developing, people spend money making lenses with million materials instead of glass and plastics.

Passage 4

【A】Look out Gucci and Prada. China's zest for Western products, which has made it the leading market for luxury goods since 2012, is moving downstream. Michael DeSimone realized it when he and colleagues toured a warehouse loaded with items destined for China. "We expected the Michael Kors designer handbags," said DeSimone, chief executive officer of e-commerce logistics handler Border free Inc. "What we didn't expect were the Cosco car seats."

【B】These days it's the prosaic - pink Barbie backpacks, California almonds, Oral-B electric toothbrushes - that Chinese click on more often when they shop American purveyors. Worried about the bona fides of what is on the shelves in a country famous for knockoffs, they are looking online to the United States for reliability and brand authenticity in ordinary consumer goods. "There's a pent-up demand for the real deal," said Krista Garcia, an EMarketer Inc retail analyst. "Not just luxury but more middle-class, mainstream American brands."

【C】Cross-border purchases by China's Web shoppers grew from less than $2 billion in 2010 to more than $20 billion in 2014, with the US the destination of choice for clothing and personal care and baby products, according to EMarketer. It predicts China's e-commerce market, which supplanted the US as the biggest in 2013, will be twice the size in five years.

【D】That helps explain why thousands of American brands, from Converse sneakers to Crest white strips, are popping up on digital marketplaces owned by Internet giant Alibaba Group Holding Ltd and its rival JD.com Inc, and why Macy's Inc and other US retailers are using Alibaba's Alipay third-party payment service on their own websites.

goods that were made in factories in their own country, said Patrick Hoss, chief marketing officer of Voyage One, which helps US retailers sell on Tmall. Chinese know standards are higher "than for the same products that are made to be sold directly in China".

【F】Chen Chen, a 25-year-old who works in a Hangzhou bank, said he also likes the prices. "It was so cheap," he said after buying Costco nuts and coffee, "cheaper than food in China". The majority of business-to-consumer online sales in China are made on Tmall and other Alibaba sites. It doesn't disclose sales data for brands or goods.

【G】Even Amazon.com Inc is on Tmall. The Seattle-based company has eight product fulfillment centers in China but has struggled to attract shoppers, so it opened an Alibaba store, selling American products such as Remington electric shavers. EBay Inc last week partnered with JD.com to create an online hub that resembles a US shopping mall, selling K'Nex construction toys from Hatfield, Pennsylvania, alongside strollers from Graco and Cuisinart blenders.

【H】Alibaba has had its own knockoff problems: After Chinese regulators accused it of tolerating merchants selling fakes, Chairman Jack Ma pledged to root out bogus products. Authenticity is key for Beijing resident Wang Lingling, 46, who shuns mainland stores and buys online or in Hong Kong. She is the kind of consumer US retailers like. "The quality of food, medicine and clothes is a huge concern for me," she said, "when I shop in the local stores."

16. Chinese know standards are not lower than for the same products which are forced to be sold directly in China.

17. The foreign brands' executive officers are looking online to the USA for reliability and brand authenticity in ordinary consumer goods.

18. One Beijing resident said when she is shopping in the local stores, the quality is a huge concern for her.

二、英译汉

1. It is reported that China's courier service（快递服务）deliver about 120 billion packages this year, overtaking the United States to become the world's largest express market. Most packages are filled with items purchased online. There are millions of online retailers in China offering competitive prices to sell goods. On November 11, 2018 alone, Chinese consumers spent 213.5 billion yuan on Taobao, the nation's largest shopping platform. With many such special shopping days, it is no wonder the courier service industry has expanded rapidly in China.

2. Xu Xiake explored 16 provinces in his life, traveling across almost all of China. During his studies, he never blindly trusted what books said. Instead, he discovered many mistakes in the maps and records made by earlier scholars. To get accurate results, he rarely used carts or boats. Most of the time, he walked long distances, climbing mountains and hills.

3. Chongqing, a major city in China, is leading the way in smart and eco-friendly transportation. In 2024, the city produced 953,200 new energy vehicles (NEVs), a 90.5% increase from the previous year. By 2025, it aims to make over 1.3 million NEVs, including electric cars and hydrogen-powered vehicles. These cars reduce air pollution and cut carbon emissions, helping fight climate change.

第四节　写作

Exercise 1

Dear Sir or Madam,

I’m Li Hua, a college student. I have learned the news on the Internet that a winter camp is to be held in our motherland by a world-renowned International College Association, which is so inviting that I can’t take my eyes off it.

Having an excellent command of English allows me to participate in various contests and activities both at home and abroad, making me a more confident individual. What’s more, I can make friends from other cultural backgrounds and hopefully I’ll become more broad-minded. Meanwhile, my keen interest in Chinese culture adds luster to my application because I can share with foreign friends about the classics, the folk art, the traditional crafts etc.

Once accepted, I will be more than delighted to work harder for my academic performance.

Sincerely,

Li Hua
